THE SUMMER CAMP THAT’S CHANGING THE JEWISH WORLD

THE ULTIMATE GUIDE TO CAMP SZARVAS

Imagine a JEWISH DREAMLAND where...

Your best friends are Hungarian, Israeli, Croatian, Polish, Romanian, Russian, American... and ALL JEWISH.
There is no one way to be a Szarvas camper. We come from big cities and small towns. Some of us were born in the Jewish community, and we cherish our early memories of JCC preschools and Passover seders at home. Others among us are the great-grandchildren of Holocaust survivors and Jews who lived in the shadows under Communism—the first in our families to embrace our Jewish identities in decades. Some of us celebrate Shabbat with our parents every week, and some of us are learning about Shabbat for the first time. We come from Poland, Hungary, Bulgaria, Moldova, India, Turkey, the United States, Israel, and beyond.

All of us have found a home here. Szarvas is the kind of miracle that should not have worked. Who would have thought that mixing so many languages and cultures and ways of being Jewish would lead to such a strong and supportive community? But we are proof that we are strongest together. Our Jewishness bolsters us. We learn from each other. We push each other. We grow together.

Each summer, we travel hundreds and thousands of miles—by car, bus, train, and plane—to come to this Jewish dreamland in the Hungarian countryside. We swim and sing, dance and daven, learn about the Western Wall and climb rock walls, too. We find ourselves here.

For many of us, Szarvas feels like the one spot in the world where we can show up with our full selves, without any fear.

When we leave each summer, we don’t just bring back friendship bracelets and inside jokes. We return to our local Jewish communities inspired and equipped with the leadership and organizing skills needed to create the Jewish communities of our dreams.

There are more than 25,000 of us, campers and staff and alumni. We have gone on to launch local camps, run Jewish community centers and non-profits, and more. We have built—and continue to build—the Jewish world we want to live in.

Welcome home. We are so excited to share the magic with you.
On 17 picturesque acres of rural southeastern Hungarian countryside in Békés County, an area known for its mild springs and stunning sunflower fields, you will find a surprising sight: Camp Szarvas. Founded in 1990, in the shadow of the fallen Soviet Union, it began as a place for young European Jews to rediscover their heritage.

Over the decades, Szarvas has become so much more than a summer camp, or even a hub for Jewish learning. Today, it is the global home for reinvigorated Jewish identity that is fueling communities across Central and Eastern Europe and beyond. Camp Szarvas now hosts 1,600 Jewish campers, aged 6-18, every summer. Its richly diverse community is more than just campers, counselors, and staff – they are the next generation of Jewish leaders.

On these 17 picturesque acres, we have cultivated an oasis of revival where, each summer, Judaism comes alive. There is a special energy, impossible to miss. You can feel it in the air. It is two new friends teaching each other how to say hello, the stars on a quiet evening, a dining hall full of kids screaming blessings at the top of their lungs.

But don’t take our word for it…
See it for yourself.
“Szarvas has changed my life. I have met so many different people from so many different places who practice Judaism so differently from me. It’s given me the ability to better understand my religion and my beliefs.”

JEWISH LEARNING,
SZARVAS STYLE

COME AS YOU ARE

We know being Jewish is not one-size-fits-all, and that is especially true at Szarvas. From the cultural to the traditional, the religious to the curious, we make sure every camper feels at home at Szarvas and has something to learn.

BUT HOW?

The Szarvas curriculum is carefully designed to be accessible, thought-provoking, and fun. Religious traditions are only one part of the story; campers are encouraged to think outside the box – outside the synagogue – and draw inspiration from the full spectrum of Jewish culture and history as they explore what it means to be Jewish now.

Each summer at Szarvas has a guiding theme, a lens through which campers explore Judaism. This theme comes to life in a new way each day. The days build on each other, forming a Jewish story that leads campers naturally towards their own understanding of what Judaism means to them, and how they can apply it in their daily life.

THE DINING HALL: the HEART of Camp Szarvas

Not just a place for meals, the dining hall is the central hub of camp life, a communal space for singing, chanting, dancing, and laughing.
When you stop to think about it, it is almost inconceivable that Szarvas even exists -- a stone's throw away from the cities and countries most recognizable to Jews for their Holocaust history.

Most Szarvas campers come from Central and Eastern European communities decimated during World War II. In the following decades, Jewish culture and religious life were all but snuffed out by communist regimes.

But against all odds, a new generation of young Jews from all over flock to Szarvas yearning for connection and eager to discover their own expression of what it means to be Jewish.

GROWING UP SZARVAS

Many Jews have literally grown up at Szarvas -- evolving from campers to madrichim (counselors), unit heads, and program specialists. Our 25,000-plus alumni from more than 30 countries around the world often go on to become the next generation of Jewish leaders in their home communities. For these young Jews, Szarvas is not just a place; the confident Jewish identity, pluralistic and inclusive worldview, and life lessons that Szarvas provides are central to who they are.

THE SZARVAS EFFECT

It is hard to overstate the impact Szarvas has had on the Jewish world. The fact that Jewish communities across Eastern and Central Europe are thriving is due, in no small part, to the Jews nurtured by Szarvas every summer since 1990.

Campers leave Szarvas equipped with a powerful connection to their Jewish heritage and the leadership, communication, and organizing skills to build the Jewish communities of their dreams. Thanks to alumni, Jewish community centers, kindergartens, and local camps have sprung up all over Europe, including Poland, Romania, Bulgaria, and the Baltics. Each year’s Szarvas curriculum -- a 60+ page booklet rich in Jewish thought and challenging questions -- travels around the world, fostering vibrant Jewish life by looking toward the future while drawing from the past.

"Who would have thought that the original vision for Szarvas would be as relevant today as it was in 1990?"

Today’s campers are more sophisticated and engaged than ever before, coming from communities that have already benefited from decades of Szarvas and other Jewish community programs. They are excited to see what comes next, and it is up to us to give them a world-class Jewish summer camp experience.

To keep the magic of Szarvas alive — and to expand the scope of communities it touches — we need to invest in the future. That means updated, contemporary facilities, a rich offering of activities, and increased capacity so we can serve more campers than ever.

We know that each new camper is more than just a bright-eyed kid — the Jewish passion and purpose they discover at Szarvas is a spark. That spark ignites a renewed fire of Jewish culture and tradition that touches thousands. By investing in Szarvas, we are not just giving kids a life-changing experience; we are changing the Jewish world.

Szarvas has already rekindled the flame of Judaism across Europe and beyond. It is vital that we transition Szarvas into its next phase with intention. Your support allows us to continue looking toward the future, drawing on the momentum we have built over the last 30 years to create a sustainable institution which will amplify our progress for decades to come.

“Szarvas smuggled into our everyday lives an unshakable Jewish identity, based on real values, knowledge and a unique sense of affinity to our heroes, books and miracles.”

— Andras Buchler
President, Sopron Jewish Community of Hungary
Szarvas is so much more than a summer camp. For so many young people, this 12-day-long camp is their first real encounter with our people’s customs and traditions. It’s a catalyst for growth and connection — an inclusive, redefined Jewish identity they can call their own and take back to their home communities. It’s a captivating feeling that’s deeply personal, and it’s one I know firsthand.

Like many of our campers, my own Jewish identity blossomed and flourished at Szarvas. I was born under communism, when Jewish life was under attack. My family was Jewish, but I didn’t understand what that meant, the role that heritage could play in my life. I celebrated my first Shabbat at Szarvas. I found Judaism here; I found myself here.

Today, the news is full of stories about Europe’s growing anti-Semitism, reports of Jews fearing for their safety when wearing yarmulkes in public, and security details surrounding Jewish schools. I’m fortunate. Every day I witness the other side: At Szarvas, European Jewish life is brimming with possibility and young Jews are unabashedly proud of who they are, eager to contribute to the rich tapestry that makes up the global Jewish experience today.

I have the most fun job in the world, but the real reason I’ve devoted my life to this cause is that the work we do is critical. We inspire the next generation to action; future community leaders, future engaged Jews, and maybe even the future director of Szarvas are among the campers right now, singing or swimming or climbing the rock wall. Others will change the world in amazing ways we can’t yet imagine.

Thank you for joining us on this incredible journey. Your support guarantees our children have the same opportunity I had to discover, explore, and find meaning in their Jewish roots. I can’t wait to see what they do with that gift.

"At Szarvas, European Jewish life is brimming with possibility and young Jews are unabashedly proud of who they are."
